

McAleer Intends to Use Johnson Today in Desperate Effort to Break Losing Streak

HARVARD'S VICTORY A BLOW TO YALE

Rowing Experts Convinced
Changes In Methods Are Necessary.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 1.—Rowing experts at Yale are about convinced today, as the result of yesterday's triple defeat by Harvard, that radical changes will have to be made in Yale's rowing methods if the Blue is ever to gain to be a serious contender with Harvard.

There is no consensus of opinion yet as to what the trouble is, but there is something wrong, and that it is vital is practically conceded.

It is probable that a conference of leading Yale oarsmen will be called within a short time to discuss the situation. This conference will undoubtedly be secret, as Yale's athletic leaders never did like publicity to admit that they were in trouble.

Three successive defeats of Yale by Harvard, and, in the last two years, a clean-up in all three races, are hard for Yale to swallow. The way things used to be, either rowing affairs must get better at Yale or they will become a whole lot worse, is the opinion of the rowing men who are still here. Present methods cannot be continued.

Every Yale man is willing to admit that all of Harvard's crews yesterday, from a physical standpoint, were vastly superior to Yale's. This physical superiority was noticeable in the big race, when the two crews were practically the same stroke and for three miles kept on almost even terms. But all this time Yale was "plugging" with all her might, while Harvard was rowing easily. In the last mile Harvard simply decided to "give Yale a beating," instead of merely winning the race, and she tore off a lead of four lengths in quick order. After the finish the Yale-ians were limp and exhausted, while the Crimson oarsmen were laughing and waving to friends in the lane of yachts.

Either way the problem is solved. Coach Kennedy is coming in for criticism and will likely be made the "sue." Whether Yale's poor showing in the last three years is from the bad selection of men, such as Stroke Griswold, who collapsed two years ago, or from bad coaching or a lack of modern equipment, the blame is believed to be close to Kennedy's door, as it has not yet been charged that Kennedy is hampered by outside interference.

Whatever the trouble, the fact remains that Yale is disgusted, and a "blow up" is imminent.

INTERCITY SERIES TO BE DISCUSSED

Promoters Will Be Guests of F. W. Bolgiano In This City.

M. N. Rawlings, president of the Philadelphia Inquirer League, and J. F. Flagg, president of the Interborough League of New York, who, with F. W. Bolgiano of the District Amateur Commission, constitute the committee for the intercity post-season series, will be in Washington shortly as Mr. Bolgiano's guests, to go over the details of the series.

Each team during the series will carry its own umpire, who will officiate with the home umpire. In each case the home umpire will be designated the umpire-in-chief and will handle decisions at the plate. There remain many minor details which will be taken up shortly and the committee will have its hands full.

Besides the many individual prizes donated during the series, Mr. Flagg will present a cup to the winning team. The Philadelphia Inquirer will also present to the winner a set of new baseball suits. Some of the details have already been given out, but there still remains much to be gotten into shape.

Two more athletes left town to play professional ball. "Al" Handbise, who is thought to be one of the best outfielders in amateur circles, has joined the Goldsborough, N. J. team. Handbise has played with Cornell & Co. in the Capital City League, and with Bretano & Co. in the Commercial League. Handbise should add strength to the team.

Mike McDonald, brother of "Cy" of baseball fame, is emulating his big brother's example and is going to Hagertytown. Mike, most of his name for himself with Central High School as a baseball and football player. Since joining the Sixth team in the Sunday School League Mike has done wonders in boosting Sixth along.

AKERS TO MEET TASCOC.

Norman Akers, the District's welterweight fighter, will meet Morris Tascoc, of Baltimore, on July 4, at the big Western Skating Rink in Baltimore. The bout will be a forty-round go, preceded by three four-round preliminaries, which will begin at 5:30 o'clock, in time to receive the returns of the Jeffries-Johnson fight, which will be read by rounds at the ringside of the Tascoc-Akers fight.

OBERLIN IS RELEASED BY WASHINGTON CLUB

Together With Bill Rapp, Pitcher Will Be Allowed to Go
Wherever He Desires—Walter Johnson Is Picked to Oppose Boston Today.

By THOMAS S. RICE.

Game with Boston today, 4 p. m.

Frank Oberlin, the Washington pitcher, who has had such a string of hard luck with the Washington club this year, was released this afternoon by Manager McAleer and is free to go where he pleases.

Oberlin has had the luck to have his team mates back up behind him in several games, and in others he has purposely been selected to pitch when the opposition was known to have nominated a man who was going to go good that Washington had small chance to win anyhow. Oberlin has not yet made any definite plans, but he should have no trouble in connecting with a good job.

Bill Rapp, the Washington catcher, who has been released outright because he refused to go to Worcester, in the New England League, has not yet signed with another club. He was offered to a large number of managers before he was turned over to Worcester, but none of them wanted him, and it is likely that the Worcester offer he sponsored will develop into the best he can get.

John Henry, the new catcher from Amherst College, was expected here today, but had not reported this afternoon.

Why do the heathen race? They do not have to put up with the Washington ball team.

Walter Johnson is carded to pitch the opening game against Boston this afternoon, and we hope for the best. Hoping has become second nature to a Washington fan, and therefore we are taking the New England League season, as not rated as a big batter last year, he is said to have been improving right along this season. Last year was his first in organized ball and there was much crudity about his work, but even then he had begun to attract attention, and now he is considered by good judges well fitted for a position on a team which is to be rebuilt with youngsters.

We are getting more new players. Hooper!

Although Cunningham, the second baseman obtained from New Bedford, Mass., for delivery at the end of the New England League season, is not rated as a big batter last year, he is said to have been improving right along this season. Last year was his first in organized ball and there was much crudity about his work, but even then he had begun to attract attention, and now he is considered by good judges well fitted for a position on a team which is to be rebuilt with youngsters.

Pretty good league they have up there in New England, and Jim Murnane is a mighty good man to have as its president.

This is a season of great rejoicing for the editorial writers, bless their hearts! Nothing pleases a certain class of editorial writers so much as the seriousness of the age, the rapid decline of the Republic and the imminent danger to our civilization because of the Jeffries-Johnson prize fight on July 4. The fight has come as a great boon to the earnest souls whose desks are fragrant with the roses sent by lady subscribers, and whose spectacles are bent by the earnestness with which their owners peer into the gloom of the future trying to see some ray of light for this generation. Those dear old verbal bombs, "brutal and barbarous," "plot and blotch," "disgrace and degrade," "vulgar and vicious," "savage and senseless," etc., are being hurled right and left on typewriters with violet-colored ribbons, and great is the uplift among the truly good. But, we are glad the fight is not going to be held in Washington, because the editorial writers would pester the sporting editors to death demanding ringside seats. They themselves want to see the fight—would imperiously insist that they see it on a pass if it were held near here—and deep down in their hearts they don't care a hang how many other people see it. Their only fear would be that the attendance would lose money and go out of the business. It is merely the fashion for the said class of editorial writers to rise up on their hind legs and let out a bunch of coupled adjectives when any such topic as the fight is before the public and they should not be taken too seriously. Most of them are good fellows and some are quite human.

The success of the benefit ball game in Philadelphia yesterday for the family of the late L. C. Michael Powers, catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, was a high tribute to the generosity of the 12,000 fans who attended, and others who bought tickets, although they could not go. Probably 11,000 of the 12,000 at the benefit were also interested in the outcome of boxing matches and like to see them.

The sovereign State of Georgia, which has a prohibition law that does not prohibit, and an anti-pistol-toting law that has not stopped killings, is about to adopt a stringent anti-boxing law that will suppress the sport, amateur and professional. Encouraging Georgia's rapid fire mountaineers to use their fists instead of knives or lead in their arguments would seem to be a commendable enterprise, and somewhat more progressive than the legal discouragement of the art of using the fists as weapons of offense and defense.

The promoters of the municipal games on the Monument Lot on July 4 deserve a world of credit for their success.

In getting such a long entry list of corking good athletes. It is unfortunate that they will conflict this year with the afternoon baseball game and with the restlessness of the crowd eager to hear the first preliminary mutterings of the battle in Reno. This may make reduce the attendance, but it should be remembered that the conditions this year are entirely abnormal. We hope to see the games become an annual feature in Washington, and believe they will, and are simply giving a friendly tip to those interested not to lose heart if the number of spectators at the free show this Fourth is below what they had a right to expect. Next year the Washington ball team will probably play away from home on July 4, and there will be no Jeffries-Johnson contention as rival subjects of interest to red-blooded people. The 1911 games should draw immensely, no matter what happens this year.

Not many of the editorial writers will be at the games. They will be seated at the elbow of the telegraph operator in their office receiving the returns from the fight.

The municipal field and track meet here on the Fourth may be taken as the beginning of a movement to raise the Capital of the United States from the ranks of a fresh-water manufacturing town of half its population to the dignity of a real city. The backwardness of Washington in the matter of public playgrounds and public athletic meets is almost pitiful, and no more practical and helpful work was ever started here than that of remedying these absurd conditions. The meet will also attract the attention of the Washington public in the direction of the Monument Lot and Potomac Park as athletic fields. The original plan for Potomac Park, as enthusiastically approved by Colonel Brownell, called for football, baseball, tennis, field and track, and other games, but nothing has been done in the matter except laying them out on blue prints. July 4 tend to advertise the possibilities and advantages of Potomac Park, although the Monument Lot is the scene of the meet, and the rapidly increasing popularity of the Speedway will push the good thing along.

CAUGHT ON THE FLY IN WORLD OF BASEBALL

Chase sticks up among the leading hitters, leading run-getters, and leading base-stealers.

According to last accounts Jimmy Williams was leading the American Association in hitting, with .333.

Full river has a pitcher named Redent. Initial of first name, no doubt, is O.

Buttons Briggs, for years a star pitcher of the Cubs, now runs a saloon in Cleveland, and no longer has any ambition, so far as ball playing is concerned.

Willis Cole, the outfielder, has been fired by the White Sox. He looked like a classy star when he broke into the game, but did not quite make good. The Sox want to consign him to a minor league, and Cole says he will stay in Chicago with a semi-pro team.

Both Kroh and Prester, the Cubs' two left-handers, are out of the game on account of injuries, and President Murphy wired Ambrose Putnam, who was recently released by Louisville, asking to send on his terms.

The Cubs do not fear the Giants at all, but are a bit apprehensive about the Pirates. They have beaten the Giants six out of seven games played with them so far this season, while they have lost eight out of fourteen to the world's champions, which accounts for their feeling with regard to the two teams.

HOW NEARBY STATES TREAT THE AUTOIST

Times Gives Instructions for Benefit of July 4
Tourists.

NUMBER OF CHANGES
WORTHY OF NOTING

New York Will Have Different Laws During Latter Part of Summer.

In anticipation of the large number of trips that have been planned for July 4 by the motorists in this section, The Times has prepared a bulletin concerning automobile licenses in States popular with Capital autoists.

The same should prove of value in as much as several have recently changed their laws in regard to horse-drawn vehicles.

The main features of the State laws regarding licenses are as follows: West Virginia—Has no provision for exemption of nonresidents. Reports indicate that the officials are not very strict in enforcing the law requiring registration in the case of nonresidents passing through the State in the neighborhood of Harpers Ferry, Charles Town, etc., the residents of that section welcome tourists from other States.

Virginia—Permits nonresidents to use its roads for two periods not exceeding seven days each in each calendar year. No registration or Virginia marker of any kind required.

Delaware—For the present recognizes the Maryland registration numbers.

Pennsylvania—Maryland tourists not exempt. License fees $5 to $15. New York—Until August 1, 1910, when the new law will go into effect, New York requires no registration by nonresidents. In consequence a New York license will be recognized in Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, and other reciprocal States. The New York registration fee is $2. Hence it will be much cheaper for Marylanders to get a New York license and go into Pennsylvania than to get a Pennsylvania license and go into New York. Strictly speaking, the exemption in the reciprocal States is of residents of New York, not mere license holders residents of other States. But tourists carrying New York numbers are not apt to be questioned.

August 1, the license fees in New York will be $5 to $5, and the exemption of nonresidents will be operative only to the extent that under the laws of their State like exemption is granted residents of New York. This excludes Maryland.

New Jersey—Special license fee of $1 charged on tourists temporarily in the State. Same good for one period of eight days, or four periods of two days each in each calendar year.
